FRANTIC ENTHUSIASM FOR ADMIRAL AVENAL AND HIS STAFF IN THE CITY-RECEPTIONS IN THE ARSENAL AND THE TOWN HALL

-AN OFFICIAL DINNER TO THE RUSSIAN OFFICERS-THE PLACE BRILLIANTLY DECORATED AND CROWDED WITH STRANGERS.

Toulon, Oct. 13 .- The Russian fleet arrived here this morning. A finer day for its reception could not be imagined. The sky was cloudless and the air warm. Sixty thousand strangers slept in the town last night. An hour after daybreak the whole place awake and stirring. By 9 o'clock every stitch of bunting had been spread. Bands were playing and the crowds were cheering. The open space near the Town Hall and the streets leading to it were packed so densely that carriages could not pass through them. Hardly a man, woman or child was without a knot of French and Russian colors in the hat or on the breast. At 10:30 o'clock gunshots from the arsenal at the Quai de la Darse Vicille announced that Russians were coming. As soon as the visiting warships were sighted a light division of the French fleet, under Commander Marechal, weighed anchor and put out to meet them. At 11:30 o'clock the Russian warships Emperor Nicholas I, Admiral Nakhimoff, Pamiat Azova and Rynda were in plain view from the shore. The Frenchmen saluted and the Russians answered. Commander Marechal then boarded the Emperor Nicholas I. flagship of the squadron, and welcomed Admiral Avelan and his officers to French The naval tug Hercules, as pilot of the Russian fleet, led the way back up the harbor, the Russians proceeding at quarter Coasting vessels and pleasure craft la thick from shore to shore. CHEERS AND SALUTES FOR THE VISITORS. As the big warships moved toward the arsenal docks the spectators shouted cheer after cheer. Handkerchiefs and flags were waved from every deck to the Russians. The forts and guardships were firing salutes, and all the bands on shipboard and along shore were playing the Russian anthem. The fifty or more French warships in the harbor had all their decorations out, their yards manned and their bands playing. As the Russians passed each French warship, the latter's marines gave a long cheer in unison, and the marines of the visiting squadron cheered in return. Admiral Avelan stood uncovered on the bridge of the Emperor Nicholas I, waving his cap constantly in response to the greetings from every side. When the Russian warships had dropped anchor they all returned the salutes of the Frenchmen. ADMIRAL AVELAN LEAVES HIS FLAGSHIP.

At noon the chief officers of the French fleet and land forts visited the Russian flagship. where they were received with the greatest cordiality. In company with Commander Marechal, Admiral Avelan and his staff then took a launch for the Quai de l'Horloge, where they landed at 1 o'clock. The crowd at the quay and far back into the town filled every avail able bit of space. Windows 100 yards from the quay were filled with heads, and the roofs were white with waving handkerchiefs. The Russian Admiral was the object of incessant cheering. He was received with high military honors, and proceeded at once with his staff to pay a visit to the French naval authorities.

At the arsenal Admiral MacGuckin and Admiral Rocomaure, both stationed at Toulon, and the French staff officers advanced to welcome the visitors. After a brief but hearty exchange of greetings, Admiral Avenal and staff ere escorted on foot to the Prefecture Maritime, guns thundered a salute, a band in the Place d'Armes played the Russian anthem, and the thousands packed up to the narrow lane through which the officers passed raised deafen-

Admiral Rieunier, Minister of Marine, and Admiral Vignes, Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean squadron, awaited the Russians in a salon resplendent with crimson and gold. A few words of hearty greeting were exchanged of welcome. He rejoiced with the French people, he said, in the present evidences of sympathy between the two powerful nations, Russia and France. He was proud and happy that it had fallen to his lot to welcome the Russians to France in the name of the French Government. Admiral Rieunier's words and replied informally. Fifteen minutes later the Russians returned to the ships over the route by which they had come. The Toulon choral societies had gathered meantime at the arsenal, and as the naval party passed they sang a hymn

TOULON'S WELCOME TO THE RUSSIANS. At 3:15 o'clock Admiral Avelan and his staff landed at the quay opposite the Town Hall and, amid cheers and music, proceeded to the grand saloon of the Town Hall, where all the municipal and district officials, many Deputies and Senators, and delegates from the provinces awaited them. The hall was filled to suffocation. The Socialist Mayor of Toulon, M. Ferrare, made the first speech. His most notable words were: "The representatives of all the Departments of France have gathered here with the municipal authorities of Toulon to show you how the hearts of all Frenchmen beat ing that your visit cements the friendship of the two nations and proves the affinity of the two races." After the Mayor of Marseilles had made an address of similar tenor, Madame Juli-ette presented the Jewels bought for the Rus-sian sallors' wives with money subscribed by the women of France. Champagne was served plentifully while the Russians talked with their hotts. with one accord, animated solely by the feel-

PRANTIC ENTHUSIASM OF THE CROWD.

Admiral Avelan and his aide-de-camp Lieutenant Tolstof, appeared on the balcony of the Town Hall at 3:45 o'clock. They saw a scene of frantic enthusiasm. A shouting, singing multitude filled the square from the steps of the building back to the quays, covered the decks of many steamers and nearly swamped the small boats near the shore. As Admiral Avelan bowed his response to the cheers the military bands began with a crash the "Marseillaise," and the thousands in front of the hall sang with them. At 4 o'clock the Russians bade good-by to the officials in the large hall and returned to the quay. Their boat was towed out to the fleet by the Chamber of Commerce steamship. As they left the shore Commerce steamship. As they left the shore the air was filled with shouts of "Long live Bussia," "Long live the Czar."

After Admiral Avelan's visit to the Town Hall the Mayor and other municipal officials paid a formal return visit to the Russian flag-

A BANQUET TO THE RUSSIAN OFFICERS. Admiral Rieunier's official banquet to the issian officers was given in the grand saloon of the Prefecture. The persons present were two other Russians, besides thirty high officers of the French Navy. The menu included sharkfix soup, saddle of Siberian wild bear and truffied peacock, with delicate wines. During the paguet a hand played selections from the works of Olinka, Tschaikowsky and other Russian composers.

"With the same sentiments of respect," he added, "I couple with this homage to the imperial family of Russia, inseparable for us from the good wishes addressed to its illustrious and venerable chief." Admiral Rieunier also proposed the last toast—"to the Russian Navy and Army, to the glorious souvenirs inseribed on each page of their history, and to the confraternity of arms, born of reciprocal esteem and sympathy, which unites, and always will unite our two valiant nations."

ADMIRAL AVELAN REPLIES TO A TOAST. Admiral Avelan, broad-shouldered, and a head taller than the French Admiral, with expressive blue eyes and a full beard-a splendid and typical specimen of the Slav-repiled to the last toast. He said:

"To you all, gentlemen, I give thanks for your words of welcome and sympathy. We certainly expected a magnificent reception, but we did not hope to encounter among your valiant civil and naval population the outburst of enthusiasm of which my sailors and myself have been the object. In the name of the Russian Navy, I raise my glass to the French Navy, to France and to the valiant people of France."

The banquet was followed by a reception. Admiral Avelan returned to his flagship at 11 the last toast. He said:

Admiral Avelan returned to his flagship at 11 o'clock.

NIGHT ILLUMINATION OF TOWN AND PORT. During the evening the town and the port were beautifully illuminated. The twinkling lights of 2,000 craft of every conceivable description lying in the blue Mediterranean under a Provencal sky made an enchanting scene The streets of the town were crowded with gayly dressed sightseers. A fete was held in the Place de la Liberte. It is estimated that there are to-night 200,000 strangers in the city.

HOW SANTOS WAS DETENDED.

A CONSPIRACY TO SEIZE THE FORT WAS BE TRAYED AND ADMIRAL MELLO'S AT-TACK CAUSED NO DAMAGE.

The steamship Biela, of the Lamport and Holt Line, commanded by Captain Davies, arrived here yesterday from Santos, Frazil. The Biela left Rio de Janeiro on August II, and reached Santos th next day. Everything was then quiet there, but five days later the news of the insurrection at Rio was received, and caused intense excitement. The soldiers at once declared for Piexoto, and Argentina was celebrated yesterday with a preparations were made to defend the town against attack by the revolutionists.

All the old hulks in the harbor were made torpedo in the town was placed in the channel and connected with an electric battery ashore.

On the sand spits, near the entrance, breast-works were thrown up, and rifle pits dug.

The only naval vessel at Santos was a guard-ship, whose crew had made no demonstration, and were believed to be loyal to Fiexoto. On September 12, however, they paid the tree in the best transfer. her 12, however, they seized two tugs in the harbor, and started in tow for Rio de Janeiro. The coal and started in tow for Rio de Janeiro. The coal supply ran out, the crew scuttled the guardship, and started ashore on the tugs. They reached San Sebastian and were arrested. The Santos people then took the crew back to Santos, where they the south. Probably the warship depended to some extent on a plot that had been formed in Santos to support her. A number of young men, inclied by an emissary of Admiral Melio's, had conspired to seize the fort and deliver it to the rebels. They were betrayed by a woman, and all were arrested. Two ringleaders were sent to Plexoto to be dealt with, and the rest were banished.

The Bleia left Santos on September 20, the day the Republica made her attack.

THE SENATE MINORITY'S VICTORY.

RESPONSIBILITY RESTS ON THE DEMOCRATS

From The Mail and Express.

The continuous session has been a continuous failure, and the responsibility rests on the members of the Democratic party who refused to support a Democratic President and to carry out the piedges of a Democratic platform. A FOREDOOMED FAILURE.

From The Brooklyn Standard-Union.

The protracted session of the Senate was, under its rules, a foredoomed failure. The minority needed but three Senators on hand, and the majority needed forty-three. There was another source of weakness. The Democratic Senators who are for repeal are as a rule not very strong in feeling. The Administration does not magnetize them, and their constituents ouside the cities are not en-

What next? Is it to be compromise? Or is the end to be the triumph of the minority over the majority and the end of all legislation for the rest of the session? Let the minority win now, and a handful of Senators hereafter, bent on defeating any measure of any description, will take the majority by the throat and rule the whole Congress.

From The Brooklyn Eagle.

The old situation remains. The course seems to be to do nothing or to concede a compromise. At the brast they can refuse this houdination without losing their sleep. The minority is content to fix the purchasing clause at a small amount of monthly buying. The question is now. Will the repealers, if the clause must stand, accept an amendment which may mitigate its evil? A REVELATION OF INCOMPETENCE.

From The Brooklyn Times.

In the "test of physical endurance" which Mr. Voorhees and his friends invited they have been conspicuously defeated, and little hope remains except for the adoption of the best available compromise. It is a poor outcome of over two months of debate, but the revelation which it gives of the utter incompetence of the Administration gives reason to hope that they will be able to accomplish very little in the way of redeeming the destructive pledges of their platform when they lock horns with the veteran fighters on the Republican side.

His address criticised in a vigorous manner the lack of uniformity between requirements for admission and for degrees in leading schools of the country. After giving a detailed account of the last national convention of editectors at Saratoga, he denounced the spirit of the expenents of various branches of study, each urking that his pet subject should be taught earlier than any other, and that the chief attention should be paid to it. He also strongly rebuked professional schools, many of which admit candidates without any examination whatever, a majority of the rest requiring only a slight examination. President Ellot regarded this as one of the growing evils of the American school system. A crowded audience listened to his address.

To the Editor of The Tribung. Sir: My attention has been called to a slight mistake in this morning's press dispatches pubished by you in common with other papers to the effect that I was in Philadeiphia yesterday in conference with representatives of the Reading bond holders' committees and the receivers. Not to speak of the fact that a slight illness has confined me to the house for the last week, so that my attendance in Philadelphia at any conference would have been impossible, I have as counsel fo Mr. Rice and other security holders affiliated with him been following an entirely different cours from that of the two committees, one tending to definite results. Under no circumstances should I definite results. Under no circumstances should I have found it necessary to go to Philadelphia to find out why the receivers would have difficulty in paying the general mortgage interest on the ist prox. The facts bearing on that subject were fully brought out by me on the application for permission to issue receivers' certificates confirmed by the subsequent course of the receivers, viz: that Reading's net earnings have been used to pay Lehigh Valley's unearned dividend, to fill the void in other people's pockets caused by unauthorized speculations with Reading's funds, and to meet other similar unwarranted expenditures. Yourstruly,

No. 24 Nassau-st., New-York, Sept. 28, 1884.

AS TO THE MOSAIC LAW. To the Editor of The Tribune.

Sir: Permit me to take issue with a writer in (p. 38), who says: "The law of Moses put the wife and children to death with the capital criminal," and he adds, "We think this was barbar ous," as, of course, we should if it was true. But first what is the law of Moses on this subject? It can be found very plainly stated Deuteronomy xxiv, 16: "The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, neither shall the children be put to death for the fathers; every man shall be put to death for his own sins." This command of Moses presumably was necessary to prevent unwarrantable and abusive application of the law which is manifest in the movements of divine justice toward the criminal jurisprudence divine justice toward the criminal jurisprudence of the land, since it was a common thing among heathen nations, e. g., the Egyptians, Persians, Macedonians and others, for the children, and even the families of criminals, to be also put to death. On this see Esther ix, 13, 14, and the reader of Herodotus will find it stated in volume III, p. 19. The heathen did indeed resort to this barbarous practice; but it does not appear that the law of Moses to be charged with this barbarism.
